Explanations :

The present parentage certificate is valid with genetic certificates of descendant and parents. The parentage is verified if all genetic markers of the descendant are compatible with those of the parents: for each marker, one allele of the descendant must be present in the mother's genetic profile, the other one must be present in the father's genetic profile. The parentage is excluded if more than two markers are not compatible between the descendant and the parents. The incompatibility of one to two markers is possibly due to a rare mutation event and is not sufficient for excluding parentage.
